The year was 1980, I was in the Army and just passed my Intelligence Analyst exam. I was now headed for Seoul, South Korea - 501st Military Intelligence Battalion. Before touching down in Seoul, we had an overnight stay in Tokyo. All my life I have been interested in the paranormal and it's because I lived in a haunted house when I was a little boy. Thinking about it, I was a paranormal investigator back in 1980 and just didn't realize it. Now that I was in Tokyo, I wanted to visit Toyama Park in Shinjuku. This park was known for its eerie atmosphere, screams at night, and urban legends of lost souls, stemming from its history as part of a wartime burial ground and site of horrible atrocities. While most of the soldiers wanted to experience the night life and meet some girls, I instead wanted to head over to this park and see if I could encounter any ghosts. I had a different mindset from the other soldiers. I must have sat in this park for about 3 hours. The only thing I experienced was a tingling sensation on my hand. The tingling lasted for about an hour. I am not sure if this was something paranormal, or just my over-active imagination. When I finally left the park, I was disappointed that I did not see a full body apparition. There were practically no people in the park and many areas of the park, I was all by myself. The park has a very dark reputation. This is what I learned about the park.

Toyama Park in Shinjuku, Tokyo, is rumored to be haunted due to its grim World War II history as a dumping ground for remains from facilities linked to the infamous Imperial Army's Unit 731, leading to reports of ghostly orbs, mysterious lights (Hitodama), and the discovery of over 100 human bones during construction, making the Hakoneyama Hill section especially eerie at night. The park's eastern side, Hakoneyama, was once part of a medical college where horrific human experimentation by Unit 731 is alleged to have occurred, with bodies disposed of on-site. In 1989, hundreds of human remains were unearthed during construction, confirming the area's dark past and fueling ghostly tales. Visitors report hearing disembodied sobbing and groaning, especially from Hakoneyama Hill. There are sightings of Hitodama, mysterious will-o'-the-wisp lights believed to be lost souls. Some experiences include seeing apparitions, and even public toilets in the park are rumored to be haunted by a man who hanged himself. You would think a park like this with so much dark history, I would have experienced something extraordinary. Unfortunately, it didn't happen. The only thing I have to talk about is the strange tingly sensation I felt on my hand.

Japan has many haunted places. A very haunted place is Kyoto. Kyoto is widely considered one of the most haunted cities in Japan due to its thousand-year history as the imperial capital, marked by numerous battles, executions, and spiritual legends. Here are some of the paranormal hotspots of Kyoto.

Kiyotaki Tunnel:
Often cited as the most haunted spot in Japan, this tunnel was built in 1927 under harsh conditions resulting in many workers dying horrible deaths. Local legends claim its 444-meter length (an unlucky number associated with death) changes between trips. There have been drivers reporting of seeing a "woman in white" jump on car hoods or appearing in their rearview mirrors.

Rokudo Chinno-ji Temple:
This temple is rumored to have a portal to the underworld. Legend says the 8th-century official Ono no Takamura used the well to descend into hell nightly to assist the King of Hell in judging the dead.

Arashiyama Bamboo Forest:
While scenic by day, the forest is a site for "ghost hunting" tours at night. It has a dark reputation for suicides and sightings of "shadowy figures" that disappear when approached.

"Bloody Ceilings" (various temples):
Several temples, including Yogen-in and Genko-an, have ceilings made from the floorboards of Fushimi Castle, where hundreds of samurai committed ritual suicide in 1600. To this day, blood-stained handprints and footprints of the deceased are still clearly visible.

Minatoya Yurei Kosodate-Ame Honpo:
Known as the "Ghost Mother Candy Shop," this 400-year-old store sells candy based on a legend of a ghostly woman who bought sweets every night to feed her baby, who had been born after she was buried.

My half-brother Andres Somprise Soyo is a Vietnam veteran and spent some R&R in Japan. One of the places he visited was Osaka Castle. Osaka Castle in Japan is widely considered to be a haunted location, with numerous local legends and ghost stories associated with its turbulent history. The castle grounds are described as one of the most spiritually active areas in the prefecture. The castle, originally built by Toyotomi Hideyoshi in 1583, has a history marked by significant battles, sieges, and deaths, leading to various paranormal legends. Visitors have reported seeing Samurai spirits. A local historian says that many locals believe the grounds are haunted by the ghosts of defeated samurai and courtiers who committed hara-kiri (ritual suicide) after the famous Battle of 1615. A prominent ghost that is often seen at this castle is the ghost of the castle's founder, Toyotomi Hideyoshi. His apparition is seen roaming the grounds. Workers of the castle have at times complained about being cursed by evil spirits. Anyone visiting this castle will hear stories about Warrior Monks and Vengeful Spirits. There is a warning of not taking any castle stones or rocks home, because those stones and rocks are cursed. My brother Andy was going to take a rock home as a souvenir and was told by a local that he will bring terrible misfortune upon himself if he brings that rock home. The local says the curse could affect his health and he could die. Andy dropped the rock immediately. Andy says..."why take the chance?"

Special Note: The following family members all spent some time in Japan, because they were in the Army. They are: (Me) Vietnam Era Vet; John Stinson (my father-in-law – Vietnam vet); Andres Somprise Soyo (my half-brother – Vietnam Vet); Paul Leaird (1st cousin – Vietnam vet) and Jose Causing (uncle – Korean War Vet) and my father Paul Marceau Roberts – (Korean War Vet). The Haunted Home of Sabrina & Matt
Paul Dale Roberts, HPI's Esoteric Detective
Halo Paranormal Investigations

ROLL CALL:
Today we have an investigation at a privately owned haunted ranch in Elk Grove, CA. The HPI (Halo Paranormal Investigations) investigators at this investigation are: Paul Dale Roberts - Lead Investigator, Chris Grissom – Technician, Holly DeLaughter - Investigator/Medium/Professional Photographer, Donna Reynolds - Investigator, Kristen Sheley - Investigator/Researcher, Justin Kohn - Investigator-in-Training, Shauna Kinchen – Investigator-in-Training.

EQUIPMENT USED:
Equipment being used for this investigation: High 8 Video Camera with Night Vision, Kinnect, several digital audio recorders for EVPs, temperature gauges and thermometers, several digital cameras, digital camera with infrared capabilities and flashlights.

We definitely needed flashlights, because this home is located on acres of land. The land according to the occupants is haunted. Holly DeLaughter felt an American Indian presence on this land. Special Note: Holly DeLaughter was once the secretary to Sylvia Brown. This home is out in open field where coyotes linger about. The occupants Matt and Sabrina gave us a briefing on how their children and grandchildren have seen a phantom Army man walking about on their land. One of their grandkids saw what he called a 'bad man' that was walking out in their yard and bathroom area. One child once told them that there was a dark looking monster in the chicken pen. Matt tells me that once when he was in the metal shed, there was sounds of heavy footsteps on the roof, when he investigated, there was no one up there. The footsteps continued to run back and forth on the roof. One of their children had a vision that the house was engulfed in flames and the smell of burned wood was resonating all through the house and other family members could smell the burned wood. One family member has seen what she describes as a white colored shadow person walking by. This family member has also seen a dark shadow creature with no discerning features crossed the living room area. The shadow creature walks on all 4 legs and has been seen a few times by other family members. A picture of Matt's brother who was a paratrooper in the Army was moved from its place on the wall to the opposite end of the wall and no one made claim of moving it. Sabrina says: "This is actually a small picture in the same frame as the larger one. The small picture was turned upside down in the frame, the picture of Matt's brother is a picture of his brother in full Army uniform". Matt's brother was paralyzed from a jump that he made, in which he was trying to do a triple flip in the air." Could this be the phantom Army man in the open fields? I can only wonder.

Matt and Sabrina were very hospitable to the HPI crew and had coffee, Pepsis, cheese, ham, crackers, assorted fruit waiting for us. She was pleased at our professionalism and how we conducted ourselves. As I interviewed Sabrina, she explained to me that her daughter has seen white shadows crisscrossing each other in the bedrooms. Matt has on many occasions seen shadowy figures move about in his home. Matt and Sabrina lived in this home for two years and the paranormal activity started two months from the time they moved in.

I interviewed one of their grandsons and their grandson told me that I should check out the bedroom with the bunk bed in it, because this is where his little brother was terrorized by a dark figure in the room. When I went back in the house, Holly told me in her own words that she felt something in that very room that the boy described with the bunk bed. Holly explains that there is some type of entity that would frighten one of the children. Holly knew nothing of this story, but yet she was telling me the same story as Sabrina's son was telling me. I then told Holly about Sabrina's son's story and how it was similar to her story.

Other notes as described in Sabrina's own words:
"The bad man has a gun. Chance told his mom "He will shoot you, mom" and wants the doors locked to keep the bad man outside.
I have seen a full-bodied shadow person in my room. He stood there for about a minute looking at me while I was looking at him.
There has also been a disembodied voice calling my son's name.
Matt has definitely been touched (tapped on the head) and I had the experience with the "cold spot" that hit my stomach while I was in bed.
Also felt a ghostly "cat" walking on the bed.

One of your investigators, I'm sorry, I don't recall which one, suggested we show Chance (the little boy) the picture of Bob, Matt's deceased brother. When we did so there was no hesitation on Chance's part. I asked him if that was the Army man and he immediately said yes. I don't know if it is or not, but we told him that the next time he sees him to say "hi, Bob" and explained that he was a good guy, Shauna took an unusual photograph in the chicken coup, it had a red tinge and a possible face. I suggested we go back and take another photograph in the same location to see if we can recreate the image. Chris checked with Shauna to see who was in the chicken coup with her. He discovered it was Justin. At the time when the photograph was taken, Justin's camera infra-red light was turned on, which caused the red tinge. A trickery of light caused the image of what appeared to be a face. The photograph was debunked.

Location:
Not disclosed per client's request

History:
Occupants have lived in the home for 2 years. No other information was known about the property. Holly our resident Medium feels that there might have been a Native American presence on the land occupied by the clients.

Reported paranormal activity:
Occupants related to me the activity started only after living in the home 2 months. One of the grandchildren has had numerous run ins with a malevolent entity both inside the home and while playing outside. Soon after the incident that happened outside, the child refused to go out to play. He was genuinely frightened by the experiences. While working out in the garage one evening the male occupant heard footsteps running across the roof. After investigating what was going on he found that there was no one on the roof. One of the occupants have seen what she describes as a white shadow person walking by and a dark type creature crossing by the living room area. The shadow creature walks on all 4 legs and has been seen a few times by other family members. There was a small picture of the male occupants deceased brother in his Military uniform place in the corner of a picture frame. One afternoon the picture was found upside down. None of the other family members claimed to have moved it. There have been claims of a disembodied voice calling one of the grandchildren's names.

Findings:
There were numerous orbs caught on film. Orbs can be almost anything from dust, dew drops, light refractions, lint, skin flakes, etc. Unless you can show that orbs have intelligent movement, the orb photos are inconclusive. There was also what looks to be ectoplasm caught on film by one investigator outside. I tried to debunk the ectoplasm but was unable to do so, due to no one smoked a cigarette or vaped, and the weather was too warm for their breath to be the cause. The ectoplasm type of photo could have been caused by the distortion of light. Despite countless attempts at finding any EVPs, none were recorded. No other video or audio evidence was discovered as being conclusive.

Conclusion:
After hearing all the family member claims of the activity being experienced on the property and the evidence that was collected during the investigation, I feel that there is a possibility of paranormal activity.

Cleansing:
I conducted a Roman Catholic house blessing. So far, the family says everything has been peaceful.

DEMON IN THE PHOTO
When I got home, I received a photo in my email. A family that needs assistance says they are being haunted by a demon. They sent me a picture of their daughter and right behind their daughter is what looks like to be a demon. They want the full investigation of their home to be confidential. They are requesting a cleansings and plan to get their daughter baptized, as suggested by me.

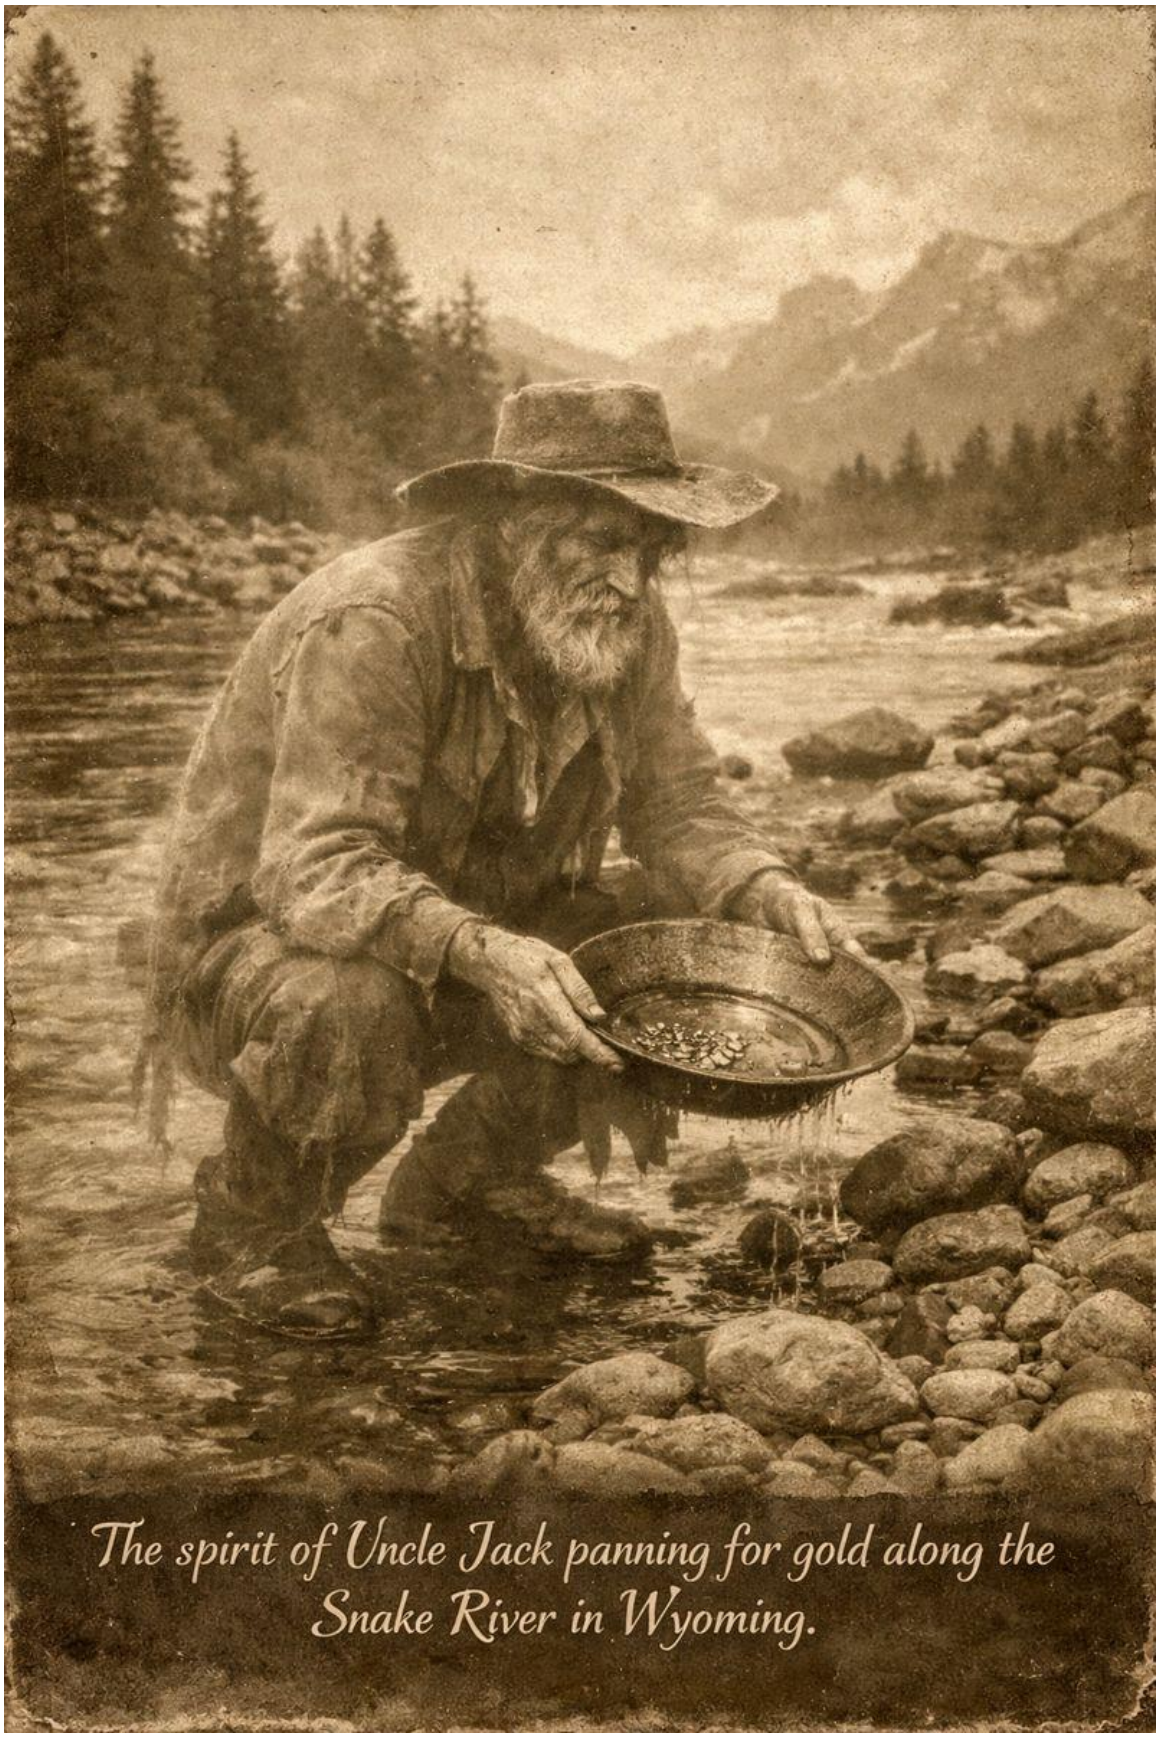
Grand Teton National Park has its Ghosts!

Paul Dale Roberts, HPI's Esoteric Detective
Halo Paranormal Investigations



The spirit of Uncle Jack panning for gold along the Snake River in Wyoming.

Grand Teton National Park has its share of ghost stories and local legends, particularly around Death Canyon, with tales of mysterious lights, phantom hikers, unsettling presences, and even ghostly figures seen by campers, reflecting the area's rich history and rugged wilderness. Some reported phenomena include strange footsteps, disembodied voices, and feelings of being watched, often linked to early settlers or lost individuals in the vast backcountry. My wife Deanna Jaxine Stinson while living in Deer Lodge, Montana would visit the State of Wyoming here and there. Deanna likes the wilderness and has fond memories of Grand Teton National Park. Here are some of the haunted locations at this park.

Death Canyon:
The canyon's name likely comes from the disappearance of a member of the 1899 Thomas Bannon survey party who wandered into the canyon and was never seen again. Legendary local author and "dude wrangler" Struthers Burt, who founded one of the first dude ranches in the area, claimed to have experienced unexplainable phenomena and seen ghosts while base camping there. He reported hearing phantom footsteps and the sound of a horse galloping where no horse could have traveled. Deanna while hiking at Death Canyon heard disembodied footsteps behind her. At times the footsteps seemed to be closing in and when she would stop and turn around, the sound of footsteps would stop. During her hike, she also heard a man laughing. Hikers have reported seeing guiding lights when lost, while others hear phantom footsteps, panting dogs, or chilling screams.

Aspen Hill Cemetery & Elliot Cemetery:
These historic burial grounds near Jackson Hole are associated with ghostly sightings, with many early pioneers laid to rest there. This cemetery is explicitly identified as one of the most haunted places in Jackson. It is known for its "old and wild" atmosphere and a history of haphazard burials on a steep hillside before the site was officially surveyed. Locals have seen two middle-aged women sitting on the grass talking to each other. Both are wearing period outfits. Leslie Macon, a visitor approached the two ladies and asked them a question about the cemetery. The two ladies then disappeared. A common theme by locals is the feeling of being watched or an overall uneasy atmosphere in certain spots.

Deadman's Bar:
A popular spot for river floats, this area also has legends tied to its history. Deanna says she did not encounter any ghosts, but felt the strong negative energy that resonates in this area. In 1886, three German prospectors (Henry Welter, T.H. Tiggerman, and August Kellenberger) were murdered and buried on a sandbar in the Snake River. Their partner, John Tonnar, who claimed self-defense, was acquitted. The area is considered "haunted" in the sense of local lore and dark history rather than a place with reported, active paranormal sightings. It is a well-known spot in Grand Teton National Park where the bodies were discovered, and it remains a popular, albeit eerie, stop for rafters and hikers. Taylor Lindstrom from Michigan claims that he has seen a full-bodied apparition and believes it was John Tonnar. He said the apparition seemed like he was in a panic, running back and forth, with his hands on his head. Taylor says the apparition went behind a tree and was not seen again. While most people do not see any ghosts at Deadman's Bar, Taylor is the only one who claims he may have seen John Tonnar's ghost.

SALOON
John Sargent,
Outlaw terrorizing the citizens of Wyoming.

John Sargent's Grave:
The grave of a man known for his cruel reputation is located by Jackson Lake and adds to the park's spooky lore. Based on available local history and ghost-hunting accounts, John Sargent's grave near Jackson Lake in Wyoming has a reputation for being haunted, largely stemming from his sinister reputation in life. John Sargent was a homesteader in the Jackson Hole area who, along with his wife Edith, lived on what is now the AMK Ranch. Sargent was considered a pariah, often described as a "shifty and cruel" man. Although his cabin is long gone, his gravestone remains in the area, and it is frequently cited in local lore as a haunted location. Some locals claim that they have seen John Sargent's apparition walking around where his cabin used to be at. Jack Sargent was widely known throughout Jackson Hole for having a violent temper. In the summer of 1890, he murdered a man named Ray Hamilton. A few years after murdering Hamilton, Sargent also killed his wife, Addie.
He was operating in a region known as a "rendezvous" for outlaws, and he fit the profile of the violent, lawless element that operated in the area during that era.

Uncle Jack:
Legend speaks of a hermit known as Uncle Jack, who lived along the banks of the Snake River in the early 1900s after unintentionally killing a man. He became a recluse, living alone with only the wildlife for company. After his death, his spirit is said to remain near his old homestead, panning for gold and watching over the nature he loved. Several locals have said they have seen Uncle Jack panning for gold. There are ghost stories that Native American tribes in the Teton region talk about. One such story is the story of a young Teton brave who encounters a female woman ghost near a burial site and ultimately becomes a ghost himself, traveling with her forever.

Is Kufstein Castle Haunted?

By Paul Dale Roberts

I was stationed in Nurnberg, Germany from 1974 to 1976. During my time in Germany, I visited many countries That either bordered with Germany or they were close to Germany. Of course, I visited Innsbruck, Austria and other beautiful places in Austria, like the Kufstein Fortress.

What is amazing, is there are no real ghost stories about this castle. There is a mention of a "Lady in White" that is seen here and there on the castle grounds. I know another Lady in White. When I visited this castle, I had a strong feeling of dread, sadness and even depression. Mind you, I am not a psychic, but I did feel Deep negative feelings while visiting this castle. Here is some information about this castle, in case you ever want to visit this majestic fortress.

While no widely circulated ghost stories are specifically linked to Kufstein Fortress
Its extensive history as a prison and its dark past as a torture chamber location provide a naturally eerie atmosphere.

History and Atmosphere
The fortress, is a medieval stronghold dating back to at least 1205 AD, has a rich and often somber history.
It served as a significant political prison under the Habsburg monarchy, housing many dissidents over the centuries.
Key aspects contributing to its "haunting" atmosphere include:

- Former Prison Cells: Visitors can explore the original cell wings in the Emperor Tower, where
- prominent prisoners were held, which evokes a strong "prison feeling".
- Torture Chamber: The fortress contains a well-preserved torture chamber exhibit, a stark
- reminder of the brutal methods used in medieval times.
- The Heroes' Organ: The world's largest open-air organ, housed in the fortress, plays daily at noon
- with powerful, "haunting melodies" that echo across the valley, a memorial to the dead of World War I
- and II.

Haunted Faroe Islands

Paul Dale Roberts, HPI's Esoteric Detective
Halo Paranormal Investigations

PAUL'S EBOOKS:
jazmaonline.boards.net/thread/3222/pauls-books

Hauntings at the Capital of Torshavn
The Faroe Islands are an archipelago of 18 mountainous, volcanic islands situated in the North Atlantic Ocean, positioned roughly halfway between Iceland and Norway, and northwest of Scotland. They are a self-governing territory within the Kingdom of Denmark. You will find many ghost stories on the Faroe Islands, especially in the capital of Torshavn. One of the ghost stories that originates from Torshavn is the "Missing Man". This ghost has been seen by dozens of locals and tourists. The missing man is most likely a former Danish official, whose ghost is said to roam the streets. Some locals say that the Missing Man ghost seems to be lost. Then as you visit smaller villages, there are stories of mermen (like Marmennilin) or other sea spirits sometimes blend into the tales around Tórshavn's harbor and coastal areas.

Marmennilin of the Faroe Islands.

What is a Marmennilin?
He is described as resembling a human but is significantly smaller with long, distinctive fingers. He lived at the bottom of the sea and was considered a nuisance to fishermen, often ruining their catch. According to legend, a farmer named Anfinn caught the Marmennilin by hooking his hand, bringing him ashore, and keeping him by the fireplace. The merman only ate bait, and when taken fishing, he would point out where the best fish were located, ensuring a great catch, provided he was blessed with the sign of the cross.

The Old Cemetery (Gamli Kirkjugarður):
At this cemetery, many people have seen full body apparitions sitting on tombstones. A famous story about this cemetery is the White Cap Ghost. The story goes that a young girl saw a white cap placed on a tombstone. The girl wanted the white cap, so she stole it. As she looked back there was a ghost at the tombstone where she took the cap and he looked angry. The ghost subsequently haunted the village, forcing the girl to return the cap in silence to avoid a fatal encounter. People visiting the cemetery have also seen a little figure darting around the cemetery. This little figure is about 4 inches high and may be possible some kind of fairy.

The Prefect's Castle (Amtmansborgin):
The castles legendary ghost is the "Lost Commandant". Another Danish official that mysteriously died and is now seen as a ghost that seems to be lost. Rumor has it that a strange spell has fallen on some parts of the Faroe Islands and that when it hits an individual, they lose their sense of surroundings. They mysteriously become "lost" and will die in a mysterious way. According to Soren (a local), it's some kind of curse. Locals and tourists have also seen ghostly sheep along the hillside near the castle. One individual visiting the castle saw 15 sheep grazing along the hillside, they went back to look at the sheep, and the sheep all disappeared.

Hoydalar High School:
Locals have reported that the area around this old school is haunted. It was formerly used as a tuberculosis hospital, and the nearby "doctor's house" is associated with tragic local histories. Villagers have heard the sound of disembodied coughing and moaning. A local reported that they saw an apparition of a small boy with a broken jaw. His jaw was hanging loose, and his eyes were bulging out. Some people believe this little boy was tortured and died from his injuries.

Klaksvík Tunnels:
Some residents and workers from the 1980s have shared stories of hearing terrifying screaming in these tunnels at night, possibly linked to past accidents. One resident saw an apparition of a man with a broken neck. Travelers often describe the experience of driving through these tunnels as entering an "odd little dreamworld" or a "ghost town" environment. The older, single-lane tunnels are pitch-black, narrow, and damp, creating a naturally unsettling atmosphere that feeds into local ghost stories. The region around Klaksvík is steeped in legends of trolls and supernatural beings. Neighboring areas, like the "Troll Peninsula" (Tröllanes), have long-standing myths about mountain-dwelling trolls who terrorized villagers, contributing to a general cultural sense that the rugged, isolated landscape is inhabited by spirits. The challenging nature of these tunnels—some of which are unlit, one-lane, and require drivers to pull into passing bays to avoid oncoming traffic—creates a high-stress environment that locals and tourists sometimes refer to as "harrowing" or "frightening". A local who was driving through the tunnels kept envisioning fatal car accidents, which brought on a high level of anxiety.

One-Eyed Lars

Múli:
A well-known ghost town on the island of Borðoy. It was abandoned in the mid-20th century, though some buildings remain as seasonal holiday homes. Misty apparitions are sometimes seen. Freja, a local has seen a ghost that is known as "One Eyed Lars". This ghost has one eye that is shut and he is known to hobble about.

SUPERNATURAL BEINGS THAT HAUNT THE FAROE ISLANDS
The Hidden People (Huldufólk):
Elusive, grey-clad supernatural beings said to live in the hills and large rocks. They are respected and sometimes feared by locals.
The Nix (Nykurin):
A shapeshifting water spirit, often appearing as a beautiful horse, that lures victims into lakes like Leitisvatn to drown them.
Lost Souls at Sea:
Traditional beliefs suggest that men who die at sea often return to visit their loved ones as spirits shortly after their death.

BELOW IS A "BLAST FROM THE PAST"

Subject: A Day & Night With Ives Street Entertainment/Captain Jack and The Horror of Heila Batista the Bruxsa! Sat Mar 08, 2008 10:05 am

By Paul Dale Roberts, HPI Ghostwriter/Demonologist/Ghosthunter

Sometimes my life is topsy-turvy. There are so many things that occur all at once, it almost makes me dizzy. One of those dizzy days is Thursday, March 6, 2008. Let me tell you how this day began. I got up early in the morning, ran through my notes on demonology, because on this day I would be flying to Burbank and visiting the Ives Street Entertainment Studios located at 178 S. Victory Blvd, Ste. 206 in Burbank! Since I am the resident Demonologist for HPI, Ives Street Entertainment wanted to interview me for their upcoming documentary called Angels and Demons. My flight was Southwest 381 from Sacramento to Burbank, leaving at 8:45am, I chased down a hot Starbucks caramel macchiato and headed towards the gate. I surveyed the crowd and I noticed a woman dressed all in black with lavish long black hair to her waist and exotic looks that seem to originate from Brazil. I have been to Rio de Janeiro and I thought to myself, perhaps she is Brazilian? Hmmm. I heard them calling the B section and I knew I had no more time to ponder about this intriguing woman and jumped on my flight.

As I finally reached Burbank, I got a ring on my cell, it was Leah Welborn, my personal limo driver that would take me to the studio (a big smile). Yeah...I could hear Kool and the Gang singing Hollywood Swingin' in my ears! As Leah greeted me with big smiles, she placed her hand out for me to shake it. I don't shake, I hug. Leah says..."hey, that's nice!" As we cruised through Burbank, I looked upon the Warner Brothers Studios and checked out the Hollywood Blvd sign. Yep, this is the life! As we reached the studios, the building reminded me of an old Austrian castle with semi-modern architecture. It was impressive! As we reached the studio, they were busy interviewing the angel expert Eve Bierniat (her website: www.angelartbyeve.com). I listened to her as she sat comfortably on the couch discussing her angel encounters and her knowledge of angels. She was a fascinating woman. My turn would be next. I was introduced to Natalie Thimm, Make-up Artist. She is the make up artist for the cast of Ugly Betty. She was the make up artist for the cast from the movie 'Inalienable'. She has been the make up artist for Alice Cooper. And now on this day, she is my make up artist! If you would like to learn more about Natalie, her website is: www.nataliethimm.com and www.myspace.com/makeupbynatallerenee

She was discussing all of the celebrities she has met, as they were common folk. I was amazed at how quickly she could apply the make up, her expertise was dazzling.

HEILA BATISTA THE BRUXSA

Before I knew it, it was my turn in front of the camera and I was assisted by Steve Kaminski - Producer of Ives Street Entertainment and Michele Butler - Assistant Producer of Ives Street Entertainment. Steve and Michele work extremely well together, it was like seeing two minds in the unison of one. Steve asked the questions and Michele analyzed the production as it was taking place. Royce Dudley mastered the camera with a sharp eye.

If a bead of sweat dripped from my brow from the hot lights, Natalie was there in a heart beat fixing my face like a Nascar mechanic on the sidelines ready to change the tires on a race car! Steve drove on with the questions and I drove on with the answers, while each time I spoke, Royce observed the screen to make sure that nothing was awry. I could see Michele patiently watching in the shadowy background to make sure that everything was up to par.

Finally my interview was over with and it was like I knew everyone for a lifetime. We laughed, we joked, we talked about past projects that Steve worked on, such as the Clay Pigeons movie or his latest film on the Apocalypse. Steve treated us all to a fantastic lunch. It was a thrill and I didn't want to go, but I had to leave, because I had a 4:35pm flight back to Sacramento on Southwest flight 3046. As I was waiting for my flight, I was totally in awe..because now the Brazilian looking lady was waiting for flight 3046, she too had a flight to Burbank and was now headed back to Sacramento. This was uncanny, I had to speak with her. Come to find out, she identified herself as Shalon Delgado, a model that came to Burbank this day to attend a modeling meeting. She is breaking into the entertainment field and told me of the many independent films she has participated in. As we talked, I learn that she has had many paranormal experiences. Ahhhh...how I love networking. As we talked we pledged that we would meet again and I would write an exclusive article about her paranormal experiences. She definitely has some fascinating stories to tell. We rode back together and I learn she has 3 children and a husband that is serving in the Navy in Hawaii. I learn that Shalon is not Brazilian, but has a multitude of nationalities, which radiates her dauntless exotic beauty. Look out for my article on Shalon and if you wish to learn more about Shalon, check out her website at: www.shalondelgado.com andwww.myspace.com/shalon711

As I get home, I think..."stick a fork in me, I'm done!" Then Shannon 'Ms. Macabre' McCabe is ringing my cell phone...she asks how everything went and we discuss this for about 40 minutes, then she tells me that she has set up radio interviews with Captain Jack of WPRT Paranormal Radio. He will be interviewing Shannon McCabe - President of HPI, Jennifer Baca - Investigator, Holly DeLaughter - Investigator and no other than Paul Dale Roberts - Occult Detective; Anti-Demonic Warrior and any other title I want to give myself. Well, I can't turn this down, because Captain Jack and Jimmy of WPRT Paranormal Radio have offered me a position with WPRT as their 'content editor'. That means on a weekly basis, I will be submitting my articles to the WPRT website and at times Captain Jack will be discussing the articles that I submit.

I am honored to be part of the family of WPRT and to be associated with Captain Jack. Captain Jack is taking paranormal talk radio into the next level. He is a man that has a charming personality and engages the audience with intriguing insight into the unknown. Captain Jack will go far, just watch and see! Now, Shannon comes up with the brilliant idea of having Captain Jack interview the four of us, all in one night! I believe we made radio history! How many radio hosts have interviewed 4 people in one night? I can't think of any. The show had humor, insight and some scary moments! It was brilliantly done and Captain Jack and Shannon pulled this baby off without a hitch, until I started speaking and some weird metallic noise started interrupting the conversation that Captain Jack was having with me. It almost sounded like some interdimensional entity was trying to speak over the airwaves, it was weird! Finally my talk with Captain Jack ended and now I could head off to bed, as I was preparing for bed, I was shutting off the TV and noticed it was Lionel Ritchie on the air, I turned it up and he was singing 'All Night Long'. Ha! Yep, Lionel, you said it all, where is my pina colada? This day and night seemed like a party!

Now, before I go most of you reading this article are saying to yourselves...."come on Paul, that was cool and all, but you didn't tell us anything scary." Okay, okay..hold on everyone, there is something scary I can tell you. When I was in Vilar, Portugal, I heard a fascinating story while sitting outside of a cafe. I learned about the story of Heila Batista the Bruxsa. The man I was talking with, I will only identify as 'Longsleeves', he doesn't want to be identified in this article and he still emails me to this day. He said that in the 1920s in the town of Vilar, there was a young woman named Heila Batista. She had two children, ages 9 and 12. She dabbled in the dark arts and somehow enticed a demon into her household. The villagers noticed that Heila's personality was changing, it seemed more diabolical. Her children seemed neglected, they were always hungry and begging for food on the streets. There were strange demonic sounds that were heard from her home and the maddening sound of what sounded like barbaric sexual acts. It was rumored that Heila was engaging in a sexual liaison with a demon. On certain nights, the villagers were seeing a large bird creature flying into the night and it seemed to originate from Heila's home. The suspicions of the villagers was unbearable, they wanted to know what was happening at the home of Heila, but felt awkward in confronting Heila and her two children. Then finally it happened, a terrifying scream resonates from the home of Heila. As the awakened villagers forcefully entered Heila's home, they found her laying next to her two children, with blood dripping from her mouth. Her children were mercilessly slaughtered by their own mother. Heila was feeding off the skin and blood of her own precious children. Heila was lynched by the angry mob. Heila and her children were buried in unmarked graves and the town kept quiet about this horrific incident. Longsleeves identified Heila as being a Bruxsa. It was told that the demon that came into Heila's life, made her into a shapeshifter, that was part bird, part werewolf and part vampire. So, if you ever visit Vilar, make sure to always look behind your shoulder, because Heila the Bruxsa may have her eye on you. For more on my vacation to Portugal, see the link:
